

UNIVERSITÄT
LEIPZIG

Medizinische Fakultät

LEIPZIG SCHOOL
OF PSYCHOSOCIAL HEALTH

Kolloquium Psychosoziale Versorgungsforschung & Leipzig School of Psychosocial Health

18. September | 14:30 - 16:00 Uhr

Jo C. Phelan, PhD

Professor Emerita of Sociomedical Science and Special Lecturer in Sociomedical Science, Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University, New York, U.S.

Being an Impostor in Academia and the Role of "Impostor Syndrome" in the Reproduction of Social Inequality

Jo C. Phelan holds a master's degree in psychology and a Ph.D. in sociology. Her broad research focus is on social inequalities, particularly on the interplay between social structural conditions and social psychological processes in producing, maintaining or changing those inequalities. Her current research interests include socioeconomic inequalities as "fundamental causes" of inequalities in health and mortality, public conceptions of mental illness, and stigma, particularly stigma associated with mental illnesses. In 2022, she received the Leonard I. Pearlin Award for Distinguished Contributions to the Sociological Study of Mental Health by the American Sociological Association.

Hörsaal, Klinik für Psychiatrie und Psychotherapie, Universitätsklinikum Leipzig, AöR, Simmelweisstraße 10, 04105 Leipzig

Weitere Infos unter:
www.isap.uniklinikum-leipzig.de